

25 Years of Tribo-Chemie

Hammelburg / Bavaria

Tribo-Chemie was founded in 1992 with the aim of manufacturing "Made in Germany" release agents that provide solutions for companies looking for suitable products for pressure die casting and forging.

Tribo-Chemie has been a much in demand partner for many years when it comes to customised release agents and lubricants for an efficient, cost-optimised production process. Tribo-Chemie places great importance on the environmental compatibility of their products when developing specific formulas for individual customers. The family-run SME based in the small town of Hammelburg in Lower Franconia doesn't just supply small and major customers from the German automotive industry and other sectors, but also companies in European and non-European countries, e.g. Russia, South Korea, Indonesia and China.

Tribo-Chemie is particularly proud of its intensive customer support, as the ultimate aim is that the supplied products work perfectly in the production process at the customer's.

Production processes at individual customers are never identical and this has to be taken into account when developing and using highly-efficient release agents.

Product groups like Graphitex® and Isolat® prove themselves worldwide, under difficult conditions too. Tribo-Chemie mainly has the expertise and commitment of their mostly long-standing employees to thank for its success.

The company, managed by the Bastian family, has developed very successfully over the last few years as a result and is optimistically looking forward to the future.
